SHIPPING FRESH SALMON TO EUROPE. The first consignment of fresh salmon from British Columbia to Europe, which consisted of 20,000 pounds from Fraser River, left New-York the other day for Hamburg in a cold storage compartment of a German Frozen salmon from Canada have often been sent to England, but this is the first cargo from the Pacific Coast, and if the experiment proves successful a very large trade will result. The rivers of British Columbia yielded nearly 11,000,000 pounds of salmon during 1891, although it was reported as a bad year. EDMUND VATES.

THE DRAMA---MUSIC.

LYCEUM THEATRE-" SQUIRE KATE." In the comedy of "Squire Kate," by Robert Buits first presentation in America, an effort has been made to freight with romantic interest and to invest with picturesque theatrical accessories an episode in the experience of two English girls-orphaned sisters resident on a farm in beautiful Sussex-who loved the sme man and whose affectionate intercourse was thereupon temporarily interrupted by anxious misappre ston and tealous race. This effort has resulted t the fabrication of a play that fits the stage, because it provides opportunities for the actor and for the scenie artist, and because its course is enlivened by incident and crowned by effect. But this effort has been conducted with little or no regard for reason, coherence or the ascertained facts of human nature; and hence the comedy, while it may please at the instant view, appears, in the retrospect, both fail in construction and trivial in substance. It seemed in various ways to please a numerous and refined audience last night, for it was very richly caparisoned, and the furid and fantastic aspects of its high-pressure love-story, to gether with its occasional interludes of bovine farce, in which absurdity stands for humor, were interpreted by actors of salient talent and deep sincerity. therefore, enjoy a temporary vogue. A play that is false, however, is for that reason ephemeral.

The great truth of feminine intuition, in all matter of love, has been absolutely ignored throughout this piece; and when you put aside all thought of its adorn s, and look with clear vision at the heart of it, you and that it offers for your contemplation nothing mor important or more impressive than the spectacle of young woman afflicted with hysteria because she has found out that the man of her choice is in love with her sister. This fact, in actual life, she would have known without the intervention of any theatrical machinery to apprise her of it; and whatever feeling, it ectual life, she might have had, upon this subject, she would most sacredly have kept to herself. The woman in her senses-who becomes violent in her conduct and vituperative in her language because her love is not reciprocated may awaken pity, but certainly must forfeit respect. The woman-out of her senses-who uffers and rages because of an amatory disappointment is a subject for a doctor and not a dramatist. The heroine of this play is either one or the other and, whichever way she is viewed, she is sail to conplate and painful to remember. "squire Kate has been put together upon the principle that you must pt your effect, no matter how you get it, and hence it will only please those (and will cease to please even then, when its novelty shall have worn off) who, if estertained at the moment, are completely indifferent slike to dramatic mechanism and dramatic substance. The number of that audience, meantime, is very large Mr. Ruchanan's first title for this piece was "The Little Sister," and that title might wisely have been etained. The name of "Squire Kate" is suggestive of "The Squire," by Arthur Pinero, of which drama Kate Verity is the principal character. In each case furthermore, the heroine is a farmer, and In each case she is beloved by the patient, constant, manly, and much-enduring overseer of her farm. At that point, however, all Pesemblance ceases. Mr. Buchanan though, like Mr. Pinero, has obviously felt the in fluence of the great novelist Thomas Hardy-of whom it may be said, if originality, imagination, absolute iruthfulness, passionate feeling splendidly curbed, a shakesperean humor, and a fine style are decisive, is th best author of fiction now writing the English lan guage. It was Thomas Hardy who introduced into literature those strong, peculiar, female characters, full of the qualities of their sex, amid their unique surroundings in the rustic life of England; and when once he opened the path he soon had followers. both conscious and unconscious. Mr. Buchanan, in the making of this play of "Squire Kate," has built upon the basis of "La Fermiere," by MM. Armand Cartols and Heart Paget; but the English soil in which his French roots are planted is unmistakably that of the novels of Thomas Hardy. The old shepherd Jasper Arundel and the sombre and gloomily his tonely but, wherein the de perate Kate Thorpe comes to Jam for a love philter and the sordid old ruffian and semi-maniac Gaffer Kingsley comes to him for a poison, are strikingly significant of that original-not necessarily in their plan, but in their attributes of character and in their smosphere. The suggestions of haunted solitude, wind moonlight, a bleak wind, and the lamentable wing of the birds of night make those scenes exseedingly effective and supply for this comedy a praine touch of poetic feeling such as would be valuable if anything came of it. And in themselves spart from their context, they are excellent. Gaffer Kingsley, the step-father of George Heath-sit,—the youth who is loved by Kate Thorpe and by ler sister Hetty,—is the strongest character in Mr. Buchanan's play; but just as Kate Thorpe represents the dementia of thwarted love, so does Gaffer Kingsley represent the dementia of thwarted avarice. ermined that George shall be married to Kate, and since Hetty stands in the way he will kill Hetty with peison: wherefore he mysteriously seeks the most sheepherd by night and obtains, under the most maspicious circumstances, the drug most deadly and most fit for his purpose; and so, over this as over limost everything else in the piece there is the simost everything else in the piece there is the glare of extravagance and the disillision of improbability. Act first, indeed, as a pasional picture and as a display of the posture of the characters toward each other, is perfect, and it arouses a romantic interest at the same time that it pleases a refined taste. In this act time that it pleases a refined taste. In this act time that it pleases a refined taste. In this act deoffrey Doone's devotion to Squire Kate is touchinely indicated; the attitude of yet unspoken loves is made entirely clear, and the squire, who is about to be evicted by the avaricious curminageon, Caffer Kingsley, inherits a fortune. Act second,—requiring the spiculator to believe that an uncommonly clear-sighted woman would accept at second hand and figm a discredited source an offer of marriage from her sister's lover,—moves rapidly to a climax of delirium. Act hird shows Gaifer Kingsley's quest of a poison, his successful administration of it, and his pit ous hysteria when menaced with an exposure of his cruel and insane crime. Act fourth reveals the poisoner discounted, the younger sister saved, and the elder,—momentarily under sospicion of having tried to degree the production of the same of the same crime. DALY'S THEATRE. Mr. Pinero's comedy of "The Cabinet Minister," stick was produced at Daily's Theatre on January 12, but its final representation last night. It has been sent eight times. The public did not like it, and it declared a failure. The well-remembered farcical play of "Nancy & Co." will be revived to-night, and this production will be signalized by the re-entrance of Ada Rehan, who will play Nancy Brasher. The re appearance of Mr. William Gilbert will also contribute piquancy to the scene, and this will further be er hanced by the presence of Mrs. Gilbert, Mr. Drew and Mr. Lewis. Mr. Daly announces another new play, to be produced next week.

PALMER'S THEATRE.

The final representation of "Alabama" (at least, for the present) at Palmer's Theatre will be given to night. This piece has made the reputation of its author, Mr Augustus Thomas, and has taken its place at the head of the popular pieces relative to American life. There are a few discrepancies in its plot, but its merits far outweigh its defects, while the fidelity of its por traiture of character and of Southern life and the beauty of its spirit have commended it equally to intellectua esteem and public affection. Mr. Palmer will, no doubt and it again on a provincial tour. A new play called "The Broken Seal," by Mr. Sidney Grundy, is soon to be presented at Palmer's Theatre. In the meantime this favorite stage will for awhile be devoted to the capital play of "Jim the Penman," a revival of which will be effected on Wednesday evening.

THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

A large audience gathered at the Grand Opera House last night to see Donnelly and Girard in the off-repeat ed "Natural Gas." There is nothing new to be said The entertainment makes no appeal to serious judgment, and those who enjoy it will probably There is always a feeling of regret that the actors in 1 feel themselves free from the troublesome necessity of nnecting their specialties by lines of dialogue. The formance, with the singers, the dancers and the lakey, will go on for the rest of the week.

"DON GIOVANNI" AT THE OPERA." It was hard on to 11 o'clock last night when the curtain fell on the first act of "Don Glovanni." Under the circumstances, it would be idle to attempt to give the very serious effort made to do justice to Mozart's master work the serious and detailed consideration which it deserved. The list of names on the house-bill had a decidedly distinguished aspect. Madame Lehmann was Donna Anna; Madame Albani, Donna Elvira; Miss Var Zerlina; M. Lassalle, Don Glovanni; Her Kalisch, Don Ottavio; Signor Carbone, Masetto; Signo Scrbolini, Il Commendatore, and M. de Reszke, Lepor ello. This has the appearance of a notable cast and may go down as such in local Mistory. It does not suggest the deficiencies which prevented complete enjoyment, such as the artistic penury of Madame Albani's work and the weakness of Miss Van Zandt's voice, which prevente her arch and aminble impersonation of Zerlina from being equally effective on its musical side. The fame of these ladies will therefore profit by th record. Still, it was a great artistic hear the greatest of all operas (using that designation gratitude and admiration to have the opportunity of listening in one evening to Madame Lehmann' dramatic singing, see and hear M. Lassalle in a part which he has so thoroughly assimilated as Giovanni, to hear so lovely and suave a performance of "Dalla sua pace" and so perfect an application of the device of portamento as Herr Kallsch placed to his credit, to enjoy the pritty picture which Mis Van Zandî presented and revel in the sonorous humor of a Leporello like M. de Reszke's. It was a gratifica-tion, too, to observe the enthusiasm aroused by the good work of the evening and to note that the old opera public turned out in splendid numbers to do opera public turned honor to the opera.

"EVANGELINE" AT NIBLO'S

The burlesque called "Evangeline," which has in it first act two or three incidents that are suspected of being based on the poetic masterpiece of the same name. has been current for some seventeen years. It comes back now and then and usually finds planty of people who take delight in seeing and hearing it. It is better than many of its kind that have followed it, so it is perhaps as well to give it its course as to try to replace "Evangeline" was seen again at Niblo's Garden last night, and as many spectators reached the theatre thereby proving themselves amphibious, as the house would hold. The entertainment has given New-York considerable respite, but it has been little changed, and listening to it again was like ransacking a garret the has been for years unvisited. Jokes that were sup posed to have diverted the family of Noah were found o have originated, or at least to have been promulgated here, and the tricks and gambols seemed played by the ghosts of their former actors. When the military officer refused to answer to any name but "Ben" there were some in the audience who remembered that B. F. Butler was once a candidate for President and at another time Governor of Massachusetts, but there were also many to whom neither the name nor the make-up nid appeal.

There was one actor who played the same part last night as he did in the original production, seventeen years ago. This was James S. Maffit, who made the Lone Fisherman a famous stage figure. In spite of the years that have gathered on his head and on the buresque, h's silent ubiquity is as amusing as ever. burlesque actor who says nothing at all is sure to make no puns, and his presence is refreshing in that respect at least. Miss Hilda Thomas and Miss Ruth Davenport were acceptable in person and voice as Gabriel and Evangeline. George A. Schnier, played La Blanc, is an old acquaintance in piece this kind. E. T. Kelly acted with all the vigor, s and feeling that are expected in the part that has a to be regarded as the lowest rung of the dramatic der, the hind legs of the heifer.

THEATRICAL INCIDENTS.

Miss Sarah Cowell (Mrs. Le Moyne) appeared at the Lyceum Theatre yesterday afternoon, and read selections from the writings of Robert Browning. This is an eccentric amusement, and Miss Cowell appears to entoy it. She is a good reader, and people whose ea are not sensitive to the racket of uncouth words are consonant sounds are able to listen to her recitals of Browning's laborious verses and sometimes to fancy they are hearing poetry. Miss Cowell will read next Monday; but why not a selection from one or more of the poets? . . Robert Mantell appeared last night at the Feople's Theatre, in the Bowery, in "The Louisianian" and "A Lesson in Acting." Later in the week he will present "Monbars" and "The Corsical Brothers." . . . The spectacle of "The Twelve Tempta tions" was offered last night in the Windsor Theatre.

Mr. J. C. Duf's Opera Company gave "The Queen's Mate" last night at the Harlem Opera House.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD'S LECTURE POSTPONED. On account of the condition of Sir Edwin Arnold's health it has been decided to postpone his lecture of Japan at Daly's Theatre, set down for this morning, till the morning of Friday, February 5. The remaining reading of the course will be given on Tuesday of next week and the remaining lecture on Tuesday of the week following, as at first aunounced. Tickets sold for this morning's lecture will be good for that of February 5 without the necessity of exchanging.

SPEAKERS FOR THE AMHERST DINNER The annual dinner of the Amherst Alumni Association of New-York will take place at Sherry's to-morrow evening. The following is the list of toasts and speak ers: "The College," President Merrill E. Gates; "The Old Boys," William W. Goodrich, '52; "The Outlook a Amherst," D. Willis James; "College Athletics," Avery R. Tushman, 's3; "The Social Value of Young Men, William W. Chancellor, '86; "The Faculty," Professor H. Humphrey Neill, '66.

Sarah Cowell Le Moyne began her course of five read ings from Slakespeare and Browning at the Lycent Theatre yesterday afternoon. The weather was las and the audience was small. The selections were e tirely from Browning, the most important being "Saul, which was feelingly read and abandantly applauded Next Monday afternoon Browning's "Piopa Passes" in be read. Augustus Piton has decided to send "Mayourneen the play in which W. J. Scanlan was acting when h became insane, on the road again as soon as a trustee can be appointed to attend to Mr. Scanlan's interest in it. The actor who is to take the lending part has no yet been chosen, but he will not be made a star. The benefit of the Actors' Fund at the Broadway

Theatre this afternoon will undoubtedly be one of the most interesting occurrences of the kind this sensor.

The list of attractions is a long and excellent one. Miss Carrie Perkins, formerly known as the "Merry Mountain Maid" of "Adonis," was married yesterday to J. Wallace Black, of the "Natural Gas" company, playing this week at the Grand Opera House.
